INSCRIPTION:
(card in box with items says this): "STUCKSLAGER HAMMER;
Fourteen years ago, according to records given to the College History Project recently, the son of Oliphant P. Stuckslager formally presented to the College his father's hammer which had been used in the construction of the first building to be erected on the campus of the Iowa Agriculture College, an event which occurred in 1868. The hammer, originally purchased in Marshalltown, Iowa, is reported to have been in continuous use until the death of its owner in 1908 and his burial in the College cemetery."

Object Name	Balance
Description	The balance is inside a glass container which has a cork in one end and cellophane with a rubber band on the other end. The balance mechanism inside is entirely quartz and balances on a thin quartz thread. This mechanism is very delicate and is sensitive to one-millionth of a gram. Up to one gram of material can be held on each end. Such balances are used to measure weights of materials in a chemistry setting. The benefit of using quartz is that it is not affected by corrosive gases due to its hardness. This balance was created by Harry Svec and used by Frank Edwards during the Manhattan Project. After Edwards moved away, the balance was offered back to Svec, who disposed of the rest of the apparatus and weight chambers but saved the balance beam. It rests on a wooden stand created to fit the apparatus.

Object Name	Balance, Analytical
Description	This is a Christian Becker Chainomatic Two-Pan Balance used by Harry Svec and another graduate student in the Chemistry Department. It was a part of the department from approximately 1936-1941. Svec used this balance for a PhD research project on bacterially fermenting xylose - a sugar similar to starch found in corn cobs - in order to create an alternative to petroleum for synthetic rubber, of which Iowa could be a major producer.

This artifact is a large box made of wood and removable glass, in which the balance mechanism is encased. A drawer in the box contains weights for use with the balance. A badge inside the glass with the mechanism says "Christian Becker, Inc." and on the wood on the right side on a metal plate is inscribed "B-34583." Below that mark on the same side are the words "Des Moines Ordnance Plant 24116, D.M.O.P. Other marks by Christian Becker, Inc. are found on the artifact as well.

Object Name	Spectrometer, Mass
Description	This artifact consists of the disassembled components of a mass spectrometer manufactured at Iowa State University. Most of the pieces are metal, although a few are glass. The mass spectrometer was possibly used by Harry Svec in the Chemistry Department. Mass spectrometers are used to analyze the amount and type of chemicals in a sample.

Object Name	Instrument, Chemical
Description	The leak detector consists of a large Mason jar with a brown paper label attached with masking tape on the side, a golden but tarnished metal lid on the top, and the leak detecting instrument inside and sticking out of the top of the jar. The inner instrument is made of metal and small parts of what may be porcelain. It was created by General Electric in 1945 for use with a helium mass spectrometer in order to find gas leaks in devices. Harry Svec may have used this in his work in mass spectrometry.

Description	Ceremonial plaque in a dark blue velvet-covered presentation box. Box is hinged and clasped, and a piece of white braid that prevents its opening beyond the perpendicular. Box is padded inside and has an inner space blocked out for the plaque, made to size. Internal ribbons (red and white) sit under the plaque to facilitate its removal. Plaque is of wood with medallion, likely copper, set in the center top. The medallion has the emblem of Seoul National University: a crown of olive leaves, crossed swords, and an open book that reads "Veritas Lux Mea" ("Truth enlightens me"). Brass letters sit on the wood plaque encircling the medallion. They read "Seoul National University" with parallel text in Korean characters (presumably saying the same thing). No date appears on piece. A built-in stand fits into the back of the plaque.

Object Name	Quilt
Description	Autograph quilt created by the Iowa State University Faculty Women's Club as a gift for Ruth Boast. The quilt is made with traditional patches using the block variously called Chimney Sweep or Christian Cross. When pieced with a muslin center, this block can be used as a signature block, as in this quilt. Signature blocks alternate with white muslin blocks, Blocks are set on point with edge triangles made of the muslin. Four or five (alternating rows) blocks across by six blocks in length. Main block fabric and binding are in a dark bright floral fabric, with small stylized flowers of many varieties and colors, set on a navy background. Each autograph block has a name embroidered on it, presumably by that individual. The backing is a bleached white muslin. The quilt is machine pieced and then hand quilted. The quilting outlines blocks, forms crosses on single-square pieces, and shows a rising sun design in the large set-in triangles. The muslin squares are quilted with a stylized sunflower pattern.

Object Name Trivet

Description Item could be a trivet, for placing hot containers of food on the table, or an ornamental item, hung up on the wall. It is pear shaped; the circular bottom rounds up into handle that contains a hole for hanging. The piece is handcarved from a deep brown hardwood and has a Germanic or Scandinavian style. The center of the circle is incised with a twelve-pointed star. It is encircled by a border of open fans, curved end toward the center of the circle. Reverse has a lighter colored circle set partially into the item, perhaps intended to be like a cork backing piece to keep the entire pad from touching the surface on which it is set. At the top of the handle reverse are carved the initials MWS, slightly connected as in a maker's mark. Penciled into the lighter softwood insert are: "Jo Lois 1960; from Margart Sloss ISU Sloss I.S.U., Thanks for all your help!" There is no information to identify Jo, Lois, or Jo Lois (single person). The edges of the pad are curved slightly outwards.

Object Name	Ribbon, Prize
Description	This ribbon is made up of two components: a metal button (metal circle, pinback, front and edges covered with design on paper and clear protective plastic seal) circle, and two ribbons that hang below. One is red, reading "Centennial", and the other (left) M. Sloss. The pin/ribbon was issued as part of the celebration of the centennial of the ISU College of Veterinary Medicine, held in 1979. The front of the upper piece is yellow, with a red illustration of the ISU Campanile and Christian Peterson's "Gentle Doctor" sculpture. The drawing is marked with a 1979 copyright to Biechler. In large black letters, the upper 3/4 of the circle border readings "College of Veterinary Medicine", and the years 1879 and 1979 each appear flanking the drawing at center. In smaller red letters, the bottom of the circle reads "Iowa State University," and slightly inset at top, "100 Years and Still Learning."

Object Name	Picture, Woven
Description	Vertically oriented representational weaving. Depicts a boy in a blue shirt lying in a pasture. Four sheep are grazing, and a tethered white horse grazes further into the background. Colors are primarily green, brown, and blue. As with many of Held's weavings, there is an underlying pattern of vertical colored stripes, best seen on the reverse. Scene appears related to many other weavings in this collection, with its location, pasture, and animals.

Object Name	Picture, Woven
Description	Vertically oriented representational weaving. Piece presents a country scene where a covered wagon, pulled by a horse and leading another tied to the back, as it goes along a dirt track. Pastureland appears in the foreground, with brown hills rising in the landscape beyond the track, which runs horizontally across the piece. There are trees on the hill, and small remnants of snow are scattered across the entire picture. As with many of Held's weavings, there is an underlying pattern of vertical colored stripes, best seen on the reverse. Scene appears related to that in 2009-069.009 and others in this collection.

Description	Vertically oriented representational weaving. Depicts a rainbow trout swimming in the near foreground, with a fly-fishing fly dangling in the water from above its head. The fly itself is made of a wire hook and strands of many colors of thread tied to it. It is woven into place, with the top attached to a long loose thread hanging from the top of the weaving, representing a fishing line. There are multiple schools of fish in the background, in greens, blue-greens, and purples. The vertical edges are left with the 1/2" unweaved, leaving multicolored ribbon edges free. They appear similar to fish scales. Work is mainly in oranges and yellows. As with many of Held's works in the collection, there is an underlying vertically striped background, more visible on the reverse. Description	Vertically oriented representational weaving shows a barnyard with barn in the background. A smiling person is standing in the hayloft looking out. A chicken is flying down from the loft towards the ground. Two chickens peck the grass in the foreground. A woman in a blue dress with long braids clasps a chicken by the neck and appears to be carrying something in the other hand which could be a food bucket of some kind, or an outsized axe. The number "13" is stitched lightly to the center top. As with many of Held's works, the background consists of woven vertical stripes in various colors, in this case, with changes in the center of the piece. At the level of the barn and above, stripes are blue, pink, yellow, red, green, holden, dark purple, and several shades of green. At the barnyard or farmyard level in the piece, stripes become shades of peach and tan, with a little puple and green. From the chickens in the grass to the bottom of the piece, stripes become multiple colors of green and yellow-green, with some pink and blue as well. Label states, "Illustration from book written and illustrated by Shirley E. Held." The scene appears to have the same context as a number of other representational pieces in this collection, which suggests that some or all of the previously cataloged pieces may also appear in a published work by the artist.

Description	This is a miniature Korean celadon vase. It is a glazed form of ceramic pottery that gives the vase/pottery a stronger disposition. The celadon takes on a shiny white color. On the vase is an inscription in blue lettering. INSCRIPTION: "To Miss S.E. Held, Kynmg Rhee, 1978 - Korea" The vases and bottles (Mae-byeong, Ju-byeong), represent male and female respectively. The long slender shape of the bottles with a gentle slope at the bottom expresses the voluptuous beauty of femininity, while the wide shoulder and stockiness of the vases represents the masculine form.
